Who/What Muted you?

Emotional Wellbeing Exercise Corner

So much has happened in recent weeks that I have had little time for personal reflection. Today I am encouraging you to use personal reflection for your emotional wellbeing exercise.

Who/What muted you?

Being helpful is what I am called to do. But is it? Being helpful is a way of being, because it makes me feel useful. So, I instinctively say 'Okay then'. But why do I say that when I really mean, 'Not really' or 'Not now' or, 'Actually, please don't ask me to do that, someone else can do it'. I have learned that in all of these responses is a silent scream which says, "Noooo" ... but it is muted. So, who or what has got your voice?

Life's experiences have a way of impacting on your vocal cords and makes you hoarse so that the ability to advocate for yourself becomes unclear, uncertain, and often muted. This leaves you in a vulnerable place where you are unable to decide what is the best choice for YOU. Your capacity to feel, believe and trust what you feel, has been infiltrated and contaminated by other voices which are often louder and more intense than your own. Shouty voices are harsh and often unignorable, and therefore, appear more important than your voice. If you are not careful, you begin to self-mute because you can no longer find the 'unmute button'.

Wellbeing exercise for this week

Experience teaches that certain events and experiences in life have the power to rob you of your voice. They are subtle and coercive so that you don't even realize they are stealing your voice from you until it's gone! Rather than give you the answers, get some paper and write down:

"What has muted my voice?" "What prevented me from saying exactly what I felt?"

WARNING!

They can be very subtle; like, "I didn't want to upset him". (There, I've given you a starter for 10!). When you have done your list, find a way to share this with someone that you trust, and tell them about what got in the way of you making your voice heard. Make a commitment to yourself that you will, next time, unmute yourself and speak your truth!

Of course, if you want to share with me, please get in touch and we can talk about it together. Sincere blessings!

This is my Testimony

Jacina Abbey

During my pursuit of a new church home... I did much praying and much visiting. None of the places I attended felt like 'home'. However, when I visited NTCG College Street, I was made to feel welcomed and part of the fellowship – just like everyone else. I never felt like a visitor. I felt a part of the family and looked forward to returning each week.

The element of College Street I most enjoy is the freedom to worship. There is liberty in being in an atmosphere conducive and encouraging of open worship.

I was brought up in the church and have always been an active and serving member of the church. However, like most young people – my connection to Christ existed through the relationship my parents had with Christ. As I grew up, I began to know and understand Christ for myself, establish my own relationship with Christ; which wasn't reliant on religion, culture or tradition but birthed through true and authentic connection to and with Christ himself.

My Christian journey to date has consisted of me 'clinging on to Christ's hand'. In the moments of turbulence, feeling like all was lost I learnt to cling on to Christ's hand. When I got it wrong and was faced with self-inflicted difficulty I clung on to Christ's hand. Even in the great times of triumph and victory clinging on to Christ's hand has been my motto and course of action. Through it all... Clinging onto Christ's hand.

I embrace and celebrate the spiritual gifts the Lord has given me. Two of the spiritual gifts I've been blessed with are evangelism; the ability to reach people, relate to people, resonate with people and lead them to the Lord. I do this through the music ministry, service and giving. Along with evangelism I have the gift of discernment: the ability to understand, be insightful, aware of and be responsive to the feelings of others.

My aspiration is to continue to do my part in the building of the kingdom. I want to make a consistent contribution to the edification God's people for God's kingdom. I want to live a life that is beyond reproach, a life that is exemplary to young and growing Christians.

I am continually encouraged by Romans 8:28. This scripture is filled with much hope and reassurance. It births an unspeakable measure of peace rooted in the knowledge that in the end everything will be well. I have four points of encouragement for the congregation at College Street:

1. Never let go of Christ's hand – EVER.
2. Believe God, to do the impossible – ALWAYS.
3. Trust God's power and might – AT ALL TIMES.
4. The battle is not yours, put your gloves down and stop fighting – let the master of the ring 'Handle it'!

Thank you all for extending such kindness, love, warmth and welcome towards me – over the last 18 months. I pray that we will continue to be a blessing to each other.

If you have a story/testimony to share, please let Rev Phyllis Thompson know by emailing her on: phyllis.thompson@ntcg.org.uk
